Hunta Williams

He | Him | They

Educator

Hunta is a DeafBlind, Black trans man. He grew up in Brooklyn, NY and moved to Minneapolis to attend culinary school. From a young age, he felt “different” than his peers, always playing with boys in school. In this oral history, he shares his thoughts on coming out, his complicated relationship with his sexual orientation post-transition, police brutality and the reflective process he went through for his medical transition. Hunta’ story sheds important light on the intersections of trans, deaf, DeafBlind.
